Perhaps no social institution has changed the fabric of American society and global culture so much as the mass media, especially television and film. Now, new communication technologies portend even more significant changes as television, telephone, online news, and information combine into integrated systems. The new media and computer world of the 21st century, dazzling as it may appear, prompts serious cultural, social, and public policy questions.

In response to these issues, the Departments of Communication Studies and Journalism and Media Communication have instituted a 21-credit certified minor in Media Studies. The minor requires completion of seven courses from the following curriculum. NOTE: Communication Studies and Journalism and Media Communication majors cannot add this minor.
